THREE DEATHS FROM DRINKING COLOGNE

End of a Big Indian Spree at Pawhuska.

IT LASTED MANY DAYS

And It Included Wood Alcohol as a Delicacy.

Courier mays: The little Indian village just east of Pawhuska was terribly ex cited Wednesday night over the sudden Seath of three of its inhabitants. During the night three young Indians, all under thirty years of age, suddenly sickened and died before help could be procured. The dead men are Ne-ku-sha, Hugh Miller and Allen Gibson, all full-bloods and promising young men of the tribe. Th three had been drinking heavily for sev oral days prior to their death.

Not being able to promise liquor, the purchased cologne, forida water, vanila, oto, several bottle of each being found in Ne-kn-shir a house, where the tria had been "hatching" for the past few weeks. One empty battle found in the building had previously contained wood alcahot That liquid it is supposed, caused their death. All bettle found apout the place were empty and ranged in size from to hold a pint. They evidently emptied everything containing the least suspicion of liquor before tackling the alcohol.
